

TERMINAL EXPANSION Project

Darwin International Airport’s Terminal Expansion is the biggest project undertaken by DIA since the current terminal opened in 1991, and will see the airport double its capacity to cater for future growth.

Since its beginnings as little more than a landing strip at Fannie Bay, DIA has been an important part of the Top End community and a key contributor to its economy. Last year we had 2.25 million passengers through our doors and we expect this number to keep climbing, as new airlines join us and route opportunities open up throughout Asia.

All of this means we need more capacity. We need a bigger, more efficient terminal that can offer our visitors a better customer experience and will support our airline partners to build their businesses - improvements that will benefit our local tourism industry and regional economy.

DIA’s Terminal Expansion:

- is the biggest project undertaken by DIA since the current terminal opened in 1991
- includes $60 million in total upgrades
- will see the terminal double in size, growing from 16,000 to 27,000 square metres
- will create room for improved baggage systems and security screening areas, additional departure lounge facilities and a larger check-in area
- will be built in conjunction with three new aircraft parking bays and an upgrade of the airside lighting
- includes a larger, revamped Qantas lounge and the Territory’s first Virgin Australia lounge
- will feature exciting new retail and food and beverage outlets, the first of which, Bumbu, Hungry Jack’s and Giancarlo Café and Bar, are now open.

Initial works - eastern Terminal

The project is made up of two main components - the extension of the terminal at its eastern and western ends, and the redevelopment of areas within the existing terminal, including retail upgrades.

Construction sites at the two ends of the terminal are currently contained externally, and will be connected to the existing terminal during the first half of 2014.

The upgrade works within the terminal are more visible, and some of our new stores - Bumbu, Hungry Jack's and Giancarlo Café and Bar - have already opened. Currently being constructed is Dôme Café, a new outlet in Domestic Departures that will transform the old smoker's deck into a 170-seat restaurant with tarmac views.
